Bonus - (5 Points) 1. Complete the data camps “Modeling with Data in the Tidyverse and”Modeling with Tidymodels”. Please submit the statement of accomplishment from both data camps to earn credit (must also have your name on it). (No partial credit)

Question 1 — (5 points) 1. Load the data into your R environment directly from the URL. Ensure that you inspect the data, so that you know how to identify the necessary columns.

Response:

After the visualization, we can see how some of the data types of the variables need to be changed. It's very important to perform this step before starting our visualization and preparation of the data. These are the variables which I will transform their data types:

- Activity.period: We will separate the year and the month in two new columns
- Activity period start date: it should also be a Date instead of a character.
- GEO summary: since it's indicating two categories, domestic flights and international flights, it can be converted into a FACTOR.
- Activity type code: it can also be converted into a FACTOR since it's indicating: "enplacement", "deplacement" and "intransit".
- Price category code: it can also be converted into a FACTOR since it's indicating a "Low Cost" or a "Non Low cost" airline.
- data.as_of: should be converted into a DATE instead of a character.
- data.loaded_at: should be converted into a DATE instead of a character.

Let's perform the transformations for each of these variables:

```
air_df2 <- air_df%>%
  mutate(GEO.Summary = as.factor(GEO.Summary), Activity.Type.Code = as.factor(Activity.Type.Code), Price.Category.Code = as.factor(Price.Category.Code), Activity.Period.Start.Date = as.Date(AsOf))

#Change of the data variables
air_df3 <- air_df2 %>%
  mutate(Year = as.integer(substr(as.character(Activity.Period), 1, 4)), Month = as.integer(substr(as.character(Activity.Period), 5, 6)))

air_df3

Question 2 — (5 points) 1. Filter the dataset to extract all domestic passenger activity that occurred each year, in the month of March. After which calculate the total passengers for each period. Visualize the extracted data, using a line chart; indicate the year on the x-axis and the total passengers on the y-axis. Comment on the visualization. Note: the final/aggregated dataset should have one row for March of each year. Use the extracted data to answer the questions below.

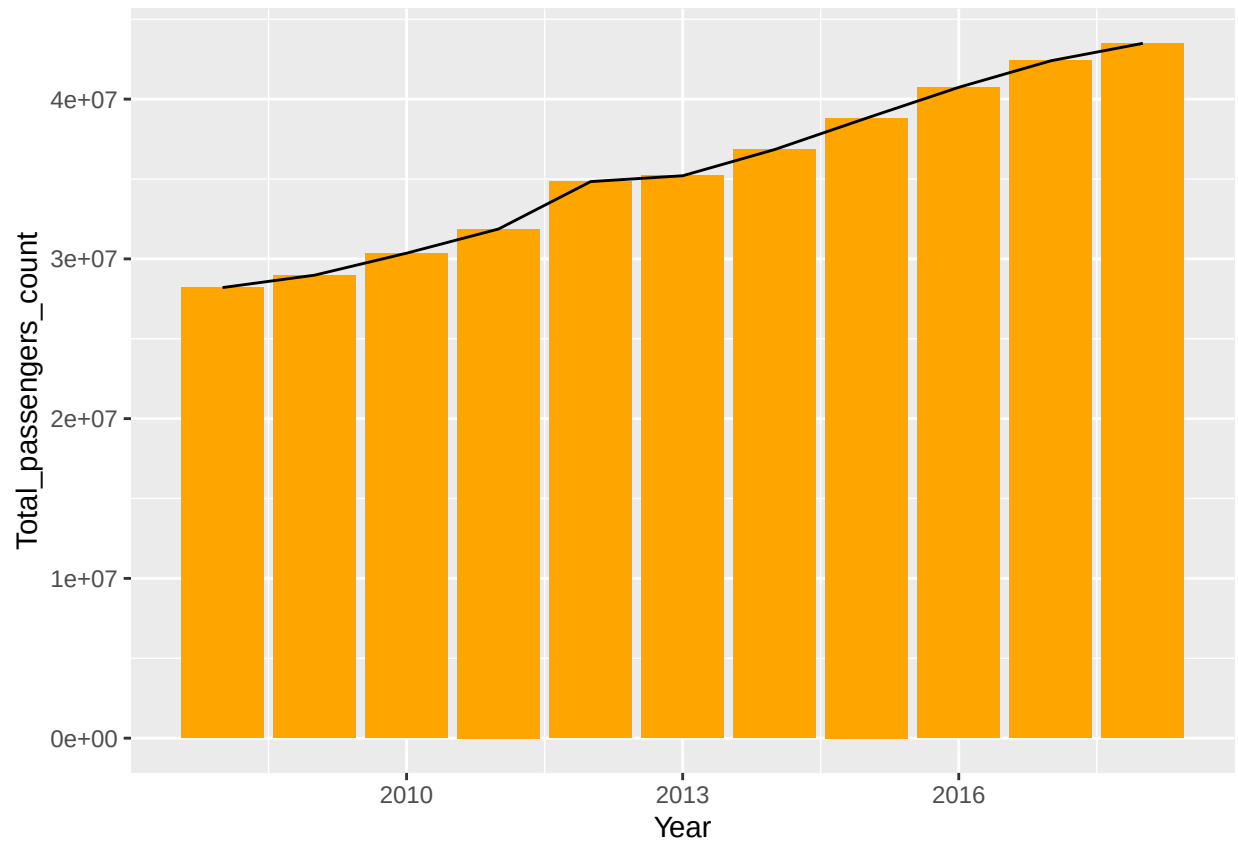

First, we will apply a filter to extract the activity that occurred in the month of March by using `Month == 3`. Then, we want to ensure that the flights are domestic, so we will set `GEO.Summary` to “Domestic”. After filtering, we will group the data by `Year` and count the total number of passengers. Finally, we will visualize the information using a line chart.

Observations from the chart: We can observe an upward trend from 2002 until 2018. After that, there is a significant decline due to the Covid-19 pandemic, reaching its lowest point in 2021. Following that year, the trend recovers and returns to its previous upward trajectory.

We can see how there is an upward trend of Domestic flights in the San Francisco Airport between the years 2008 and 2018.

We will do the same visualization but now only for the month=3 (March) to see how the data evolves overtime.

Total Passengers per Year in Domestic Flights

Question 3 — (5 points) 1. Forecast the total passenger activity for March 2019, using a simple moving average of the following time periods: 201603, 201703 and 201803. After which, calculate the error (i.e. the difference between the actual and the predicted values for March 2019). Evaluate the results; how does it compare to the actual value for the total passenger count in March 2019?

We will continue using the same data frame created above (Total Passengers in Domestic flights per year and March, month ==3).

We will create a new data frame where we will only extract the years 2016, 2017 and 2018 from the previous one and we will summarize the information by applying the formula for the moving average:

MOVING AVERAGE = (Total Passenger Counts Year 2016 + Total Passenger Counts Year 2017 + Total Passenger Counts Year 2018)/ Number of Periods (3 in this case). We can see how the actual value is higher than the forecast one. The error is 64,059.57 which is pretty high.

forecast_2019 <- air_df4 %>%
  filter(Year %in% c(2016, 2017, 2018))%>%
  summarize(Forecast_2019 = mean(Total_passengers_count))
```

```

Forecast_2019
<dbl>
1      3385803.
```

```

1       3449863
```

```
error_2019 <- data.frame(actual_2019, forecast_2019) error_2019 <- error_2019%>%
  mutate(Error_2019 = Actual_2019 - Forecast_2019)

```

```
Actual_2019 Forecast_2019 Error_2019
1       3449863       3385803    64059.67

Question 4 — (5 points) 1. Forecast the total passenger activity for 2019, using a three year weighted moving average. Apply the following weights: 3, 5, and 7 for the respective time periods: 201603, 201703 and 201803. After which, calculate the error and evaluate the result from your prediction. How does it compare to the actual value for the total passenger count in March 2019?

We will only change the forecast value by using the weighted moving average instead of the simple moving average. We are gonna calculate first the forecast value by using the formula:

WEIGHTED MOVING AVERAGE = (Weight(3) * Passengers count 2016 + Weight(5) * Passengers count 2017 + Weight(7) * Passengers count 2018)/ Sum of weights (15)

Once we have the forecast value, we can merge the data frame with the actual value for the year 2019 and calculate the difference between them to obtain the error. In that case, the calculated error is lower (17,188.73) than the previous one which means that this model fits the data better.

```
forecast_wa_2019 <- air_df4 %>%
  filter(Year %in% c(2016, 2017, 2018))%>%
  summarize(Forecast_wa_2019 = (3*Total_passengers_count[1] + 5*Total_passengers_count[2] + 7*Total_pas

# A tibble: 1 x 1
Forecast_wa_2019
<dbl>
1       3432674.
```

```
error_wa_2019 <- data.frame(actual_2019, forecast_wa_2019) error_wa_2019 <- error_wa_2019%>% mutate(Error_2019 = Actual_2019 - Forecast_wa_2019)

error_wa_2019
```

```
Actual_2019 Forecast_wa_2019 Error_2019

Question 5 — (10 points) 1. Forecast the total passenger activity for 2019 using exponential smoothing (alpha is 0.7). Comment on the prediction for March 2019 with the actual value in the dataset. Note: use data from 2008 to 2018 to build your model.

Now, instead of only using the last three years, we are going to use a range from 2008-2018. But again, we are using the dataframe created on exercise one where we are only taking into account the Domestic flights.

air_df5 <- air_df4 %>%

The Weighted Moving Average model is the one that has the least error which indicate that is the model that best fits the data. However, there are other evaluation metrics as the Mean Absolute Error or the Mean Squared Error to make the comparison more clear.

Question 6 — (10 points) 1. Build a simple linear regression model using the year and total passenger activity for all data from 2008 to 2018. After which, forecast the total passenger activity for 2019 and 2020. Comment on the results.

Now we want to build a liner regression model with all the data from 2008-2018 to then forecast the values for 2019 and 2020. We are only looking at the domestic flights and the month will be equal to 3 (March).

```
air_df6 <- air_df3 %>%
  filter(Year >= 2008 & Year <= 2018 & Month == 3 & GEO.Summary=="Domestic") %>% group_by(Year) %>%
  summarize(Total_passengers_count = sum(Passenger.Count))

Build the linear regression model
model <- lm(Total_passengers_count ~ Year, data = air_df6)

Get the summary of the model
summary(model)
```

```
##
Call:
lm(formula = Total_passengers_count ~ Year, data = air_df6)
##

Min       1Q   Median       3Q      Max

```

Now that we have a summary of the model. We know that to calculate the forecast for the following years will be:

FORECAST = Coefficient 1 (Intercept) + Coefficient 2 (Year) * YEAR

```
We can get the values of the coefficients by:

intercept <- coef(model)[1]

slope <- coef(model)[2]

forecast_lm_2019 <- intercept + slope * 2019

forecast_lm_2020 <- intercept + slope * 2020

forecast_lm_2019_2020 <- data.frame(
  Year = c(2019, 2020),
```

```

    Passengers = c(forecast_lm_2019, forecast_lm_2020)
  )

forecast_lm_2019_2020

```

```

Year Passengers
1 2019    3646905
2 2020    3778674

```

Let's now calculate the error by calculating the difference between the actual value and the forecast value:

```

We can get the values of the coefficients by:
air_df7 <- air_df3 %>%
  filter(Year >= 2019 & Year <= 2020 & Month == 3 & GEO.Summary=="Domestic") %>% group_by(Year) %>%
  summarize(Total_passengers_count = sum(Passenger.Count))

air_df8 <- data.frame(forecast_lm_2019_2020, air_df7)
air_df8 <- air_df8 %>%
  select(-Year.1) %>% mutate(Error_lm = Total_passengers_count - Passengers)

air_df8 <- air_df8 %>%
  rename(Forecast_passengers = Passengers)

air_df8

```

```

Year Forecast_passengers Total_passengers_count Error_lm
1 2019                3646905          3449863 -197042.5
2 2020                3778674          1431537 -2347137.4

The errors are relatively large because the trend of the line was upward. However, in both cases, the forecasted values were higher than the actual values. Additionally, our model doesn't account for other factors, such as the Covid-19 pandemic, which worsens the error for 2020. The model assumed the trend would continue upwards, which led it to predict increasing values, not considering the unexpected disruptions in passenger activity.

Question 7 — (10 points) 1. Calculate the mean squared error (MSE) for the models in (5 and 6) above based on the data from 2008 to 2018. Perform this step by step, using each model to make a forecast for each given time period, then calculate the squared error for each observation. After which average the squared errors. Which model has the smallest (MSE)? Note: do not use any libraries in your calculations.

```

MSE MODEL 5 but instead of only march, we want all the periods. We have this data in the air_df6 data

air_df12 <- air_df6 %>%
  mutate(Forecast = 0, Error = 0)

Initialize the first forecast

The results are very big because we are squaring the errors. A good metric to use here since the values are very big would be the Square root to be able to compare. We have to take into account that our data is in millions of passengers and when we square this the numbers become extremely high.

We can see here that the model 6 (linear regression model) fits our data better than the model 5 (exponential smoothing) since the MSE is lower.

```

result <- air_df12 > air_df9

result

```

```

MSE
[1,] TRUE

```

Let's finally calculate the RMSE for both model to then compare the value in an easier way:

```

air_df10 <- air_df9%>%
  summarize(RMSE = sqrt(MSE))

air_df13 <- air_df12%>%
  summarize(RMSE = sqrt(MSE))

air_df14 <- data.frame(air_df13, air_df10)

air_df14 <- air_df14%>%
  rename(RMSE_MOD_5 = RMSE, RMSE_MOD_6 = RMSE.1)

air_df14

```

```

RMSE_MOD_5 RMSE_MOD_6
1   186841.1   70832.67
